Our Story-Chain story from Literacy Week – Enjoy!

One sunny spring morning, the birds were chirping, the bees were buzzing and the students of Apohaqui Elementary were enjoying recess. The bell rang, and all of a sudden there was a BIG COMMOTION. Farmer George had left the gate open and his goats, cows and chickens were charging into the school with the students. Only two teachers were brave enough to chase the animals. Mrs. Bettle announced for the teachers to lock their doors, but it was too late. Mme. Carr started to chase the chickens.

Meanwhile, the cows danced funny like bunnies into the Kindergarten classroom. The cows told the students “You have to catch me!” but first they tried to eat the pizza from the students’ hot lunch. Afterwards the cows were moving, grooving and wiggling. Mrs. Steeves tried to chase them out of the room, while the K’s made mad faces at them. Then the cows started to munch on the Kindergarten’s popcorn words that were on the wall, thinking that they were also food.

Suddenly there was a LOUD scream from Mrs. Hoyt! Grade One peeked through the window and saw animals eating popcorn words. They used a key to unlock the door and then they put collars on all the animals. The cows, chickens and goats filed out the door and straight toward.... GRADE TWO !

They made a screeching, screeching, screeching noise as they thumped up the stairs ! Then the animals started eating the globe and the book caddies.

All of the grade two kids were running around. Next, Mrs. Best-Godin turned on the music. The goats, cows, and chickens started to break dance with all of the grade two kids.

Mrs. Best-Godin grabbed her music box and led the animals thumping and bumping back down the stairs. She hoped to get them outside, but they had other plans. The goats heard more music coming from down the hall where the Grade 3s were in music class with Mr. Britten.

The cow took a seat at the piano bench, the chickens took their place at the bongos, and the goats wanted to play the ukuleles. Instead of playing beautiful music the instruments started breaking. At the piano the cows hooves banged and thrashed. The bongos were filled with beak sized holes. The strings broke off the ukuleles which the goats thought they were spaghetti! Realizing they couldn’t play the instruments the animals started to sing instead. The goat bleated his best tune. BAHHHBAHHHH. MOOOOOMOOOOOOMOOOOO joined in the cow, and the chickens took up the chorus with a LOUD BUCK BUCK BUCK. The noise coming from the room was unimaginable and ....

4/5 heard and ....

Finally, the bell rang ! The cows, chickens, and goats were scared and ran all the way back to Farmer Dylan’s house !
