

one hot summer day a dog named Chestnut and his owner got on an airplane for a vacation. The owner carried the dog to their seats in his big blue crate and sat down. Just as he did Chestnut decided that he needed to use the bathroom. He knew that was the number one thing he wasn't sposed to do but he could not wait any longer. He whined and howled at his owner but then he remembered that he was on an airplane in the air. He worried and worried until he fell asleep.

By the time Chestnut woke up it was lunch and he had to use the bathroom even more!

The flight attendant came over with the lunch and when she poured the water it rained him of using the bathroom. The flight attendant asked Chestnut's owner if Chestnut would like some water too and his owner said he would love some. He was wrong.

Chestnut was so excited he jumped up and banged his head on his crate forgetting all about going to the bathroom. He drank it up as fast as he could and when he was done he finally remembered and he had to go even more. But he slept good through the night and when he woke up the next morning he needed to go even more but he was also happy and excited to because there was only one hour left of the ride but he didn't know what he was going to do because he still needed to go. But then he noticed that time was going by. There was only half an hour left of the ride. He also noticed that his watch was waiting for him. He saw the plane and everyone got off the plane, when chestnut and his owner got off his owner let chestnut out of his crate and chestnut went to the bathroom and they had a lovely vacation!
