One winter sunny morning Hopper the rabbit was sitting in his den and washing the morning birds fly over the glittering snow. But Hopper was tierd of just sitting there washing it when he could be out there living it. So one day Hopper asked his mom if he could go play in the snow. His mom said "OK but wash out for the foxs". So Hopper jumped out of the den and into the deep snow. Hopper played alot out there and all that playing made him hungrey. So Hopper looked around for a carriet and far away was a orange, juicy, sparkling carriet on a small tree. Hopper ran and ran and ran and when he was just about to get the carriet a fox started to shase him. Hopper was

So close of jumping in his den when the fox got him and bring back to his cave. First Hopper tried to get out whe he was sleeping. But the fox had very good ears and herd him. Then he tried to get out a small hole. But the fox saw him and grabbed his short, little, fluffy tail. Next he got out the big hole. But the fox got out and grabbed him. Finally Hoppers dad came jumped on the fox and hopper and his dad ran out and both lepped into there den
